- 3. Smoking: a few facts
- 4. Our pilot project
- 5. Coaching by phone: benefits & challenges
- 6. Lessons learned
- 7. Tips

Smoking 2017

- 23,1 % smokers
- 17,2 % daily smokers
- 900.000 quit attempts per year

Mortality rate

- 20.000 people in the Netherlands per year
- 1900 alcohol related (in 2016)
- 630 in traffic (2016)

Socio economic health differences

- Risk of dying of lungcancer is three times higher for people with low education, compared to high educated people.
- Because:
- Higher prevalence of smoking
- More stressful lives make it more difficult to get a smoke free life
- Costs impair the use of counselling, when not (fully) reimbursed by insurance

Smoking cessation

- 5-8 % succesful without any support
- 30-30% succesful with counselling and medication
- Counselling=motivational interviewing

Question

In what aspects does coaching by phone differ from face-to-face coaching?

- What advantages can you think of?
- What challenges can you think of?

Take a few minutes to discuss this with your neighbour

Audio fragment

Question: does this confirm or change your ideas about coaching by telephone?

Specifics of coaching by phone

- Limitation in non-verbal signs (on both sides)
 - this makes timing of 'turns' harder
 - demands other ways to make contact
 - demands you to make explicit how you feel.
- Client/coach is in his/her own environment
- Technical problems may occur

Advantages

- Telephone counselling facilitates equality:
 - No judging by appearances: both sides only get minimal clues about background, culture, colour, race, disability, style or income.
 - The client is in his or her own 'territory', not in yours.
 - The client decides in what position and in what place he or she has the conversation. Standing, laying down, doing the dishes, driving a car.

Advantages (2)

- Being in your own environment:
 - possibly makes the client (and the coach) feel more comfortable.
 - may make it easier to imagine how new behaviour will look and feel like. (miracle question)
 - may decrease the distance between coaching and reality: easier to implement new behaviour.
 - minimizes distraction from coach (appearance) and unfamiliar environment.

Advantages (3)

- Coaching by phone:
 - may make it easier to concentrate on yourself.
 - may lower the threshold to tell personal stuff.
(feeling of being anonymous)
 - may make it more natural to get to the point

challenges

- A no-cost intervention leads to more no-shows. The telephone aspect may also lower the threshold to not 'show up'.
- Some things you will never know, if your client doesn't tell (for instance a handicap)
- Some people use an e-cigarette as a tool to quit smoking. That's not an evidence based tool. How to handle this?

Lessons learned

- We could more frequently ask for the exceptions.
- Quitting smoking is often a 100% change. Which demands specific scale questions.
- It's possible to create a good relationship by phone.
- Coaching by telephone increases equality in the coach-client relationship and creates surprising situations.
- Complimenting and increasing self-efficacy is essential!

Lessons learned

- Finding clients is harder than we thought.
- SFC is useful for clients aiming for a smoke free life.
- The miracle-question works fine in a telephone conversation:
